General Matthew Ridgway

General Matthew Ridgway assumed command of the Eighth Army in Korea in December 1950, following the dismissal of General Walton Walker.

Ridgway was a highly experienced and decorated officer who had served with distinction in World War II. He quickly restored order to the Eighth

Army and led it to a series of victories against the North Koreans and Chinese.

General Walton Walker

General Walton Walker was the first commander of the Eighth Army in Korea. He was a highly respected and experienced officer who had served with distinction in World War II. However, Walker's leadership was questioned after the Eighth Army was forced to retreat from North Korea in the face of a massive Chinese offensive in November 1950. He was killed in a jeep accident shortly after being relieved of command.

General Edward Almond

General Edward Almond was the commander of the X Corps during the Battle of Chosin Reservoir. Almond's aggressive leadership helped to save the X Corps from annihilation, but he was also criticized for his handling of the battle. Almond was relieved of command shortly after the battle and returned to the United States.

General Frank Milburn

General Frank Milburn was the commander of the US 24th Infantry Division during the Battle of Chipyong-ni. Milburn's division played a critical role in halting the Chinese advance and preventing them from cutting off the Eighth Army. Milburn was awarded the Medal of Honor for his leadership during the battle.

General William Dean

General William Dean was the commander of the US 24th Infantry Division during the Battle of Taejon. Dean's division was surrounded by Chinese forces and forced to surrender. Dean was held as a prisoner of war for over two years.

General George Stratemeyer

General George Stratemeyer was the commander of the Far East Air Forces during the Korean War. Stratemeyer was a highly experienced and decorated officer who had served with distinction in World War II. He was responsible for planning and executing the air campaign against North Korea and China.

General John Coulter

General John Coulter was the commander of the US 25th Infantry Division during the Korean War. Coulter's division played a critical role in the Battle of Inchon and the subsequent advance into North Korea. Coulter was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for his leadership during the war.
