Nathan Tidridge was a handsome and charming young man. He was witty and intelligent, and he made Mary laugh. He was also a skilled musician and dancer, and he often entertained Mary with his talents. Mary was drawn to his warmth and kindness, and she found solace in his company.

Their love affair was not without its risks. If their relationship was discovered, Mary could be disinherited, and Nathan could be executed for treason. However, they were both willing to take the risk. They met in secret, and they exchanged love letters that were filled with passion and longing.

The Discovery of the Affair

The Tudor court was a hotbed of gossip and intrigue, and it was not long before rumors of Mary's affair with Nathan Tidridge began to circulate. Mary's family was horrified, and her father, King Henry VII, ordered an investigation.

The investigation quickly revealed the details of Mary's relationship with Nathan Tidridge. Henry was furious, and he ordered Nathan to be arrested and thrown into the Tower of London. Mary was confined to her chambers, and she was forbidden from seeing Nathan again.

The Trial of Nathan Tidridge

Nathan Tidridge was accused of treason for having an affair with the king's daughter. He was tried and convicted, and he was sentenced to death. Mary was devastated by the news, and she begged her father to spare Nathan's life. However, Henry VII was adamant, and he refused to change his mind.

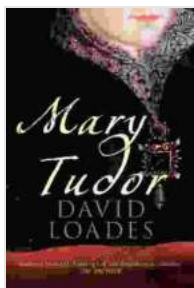

Nathan Tidridge was executed on Tower Hill on June 25, 1502. Mary was heartbroken, and she never recovered from the loss of her love. She died just a few years later, at the age of 32.

The Legacy of Mary Tudor and Nathan Tidridge

The love affair between Mary Tudor and Nathan Tidridge was a tragedy, but it is also a story of great passion and courage. Mary was a woman who was willing to defy convention and follow her heart, even at great personal cost. Nathan Tidridge was a man who loved Mary unconditionally, and he was willing to die for her.
