With her trademark honesty and humor, Lamott shares her fears, doubts, and hopes as she grapples with the prospect of her own mortality. She explores the ways in which illness can both challenge and enrich our lives, and she offers insights into the nature of suffering, compassion, and the human spirit.

Lamott's memoir is not a story of despair, but of hope and resilience. She shows us that even in the face of death, we can find meaning and purpose in our lives. She reminds us that we are all connected, and that we should cherish the time we have together.

A Critical and Commercial Success

Memoir of Living and Dying was published in 1999 to critical acclaim. The book was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Critics Circle Award, and it was named one of the 100 best books of the 20th century by the Modern Library.

The book has also been a commercial success, with over 2 million copies sold worldwide. It has been translated into more than 20 languages, and it has been adapted into a film starring Ellen Burstyn.

Quotes from the Book

"The truth is that you don't know what is going to happen tomorrow. You don't even know what is going to happen today. The only thing you can do is to live in the present moment, and to be grateful for what you have."

"Suffering is not the same as unhappiness. Suffering is when you are in pain, or when you are grieving the loss of someone you love. Unhappiness is when you are not getting what you want."

"There is no right way to die. The only important thing is to live your life to the fullest, and to be surrounded by people who love you."
