Applause is a Broadway musical with a book by Betty Comden and Adolph Green, music by Charles Strouse, and lyrics by Lee Adams. The musical is based on the 1950 film All About Eve. The story follows Margo Channing, an aging Broadway star, and Eve Harrington, a young fan who becomes her assistant and eventually tries to steal her career. Applause opened on Broadway in 1970 and ran for 896 performances. It was nominated for 10 Tony Awards and won four, including Best Musical. The musical has been revived several times, most recently in 2017.

The Story of Applause

Applause tells the story of Margo Channing, an aging Broadway star who is struggling to maintain her career. She is surrounded by a group of loyal friends and colleagues, including her best friend Karen Richards, her agent

Bill Sampson, and her director Bob Ringwood. However, Margo's life is turned upside down when she meets Eve Harrington, a young fan who becomes her assistant. Eve is initially sweet and helpful, but she soon reveals her true colors. She is ambitious and manipulative, and she will stop at nothing to achieve her goals.

Eve's machinations eventually lead to Margo's downfall. She steals Margo's role in a new play, and she turns Margo's friends and colleagues against her. Margo is left alone and heartbroken. However, she eventually finds the strength to rebuild her life. She starts a new career as a teacher, and she finds happiness with a new man.
