The Early Years

The Great Lakes Series was founded in 1957 by a group of racing enthusiasts in the Great Lakes region. The series was originally known as the Great Lakes Sports Car Club Championship, and it featured a variety of sports cars, including MGs, Triumphs, and Jaguars.

The early years of the Great Lakes Series were marked by close racing and a number of talented drivers. Some of the most notable drivers from this era include Bob Johnson, Roger Penske, and Mark Donohue.

The Golden Age

The Great Lakes Series entered its golden age in the 1960s and 1970s. During this time, the series attracted some of the best drivers in the world, including Mario Andretti, A.J. Foyt, and Al Unser Jr.

The cars that were used in the Great Lakes Series during this era were also some of the most advanced and fastest in the world. These cars included the Ford GT40, the Chevrolet Corvette, and the Lola T70.

The Modern Era

The Great Lakes Series continued to be a major force in racing in the 1980s and 1990s. However, the series began to decline in popularity in the early 2000s. This was due in part to the rise of other racing series, such as the IndyCar Series and the NASCAR Sprint Cup Series.

Despite its decline in popularity, the Great Lakes Series remains an important part of racing history. The series has produced some of the greatest drivers and cars in the world, and it has created some of the most memorable moments in racing history.

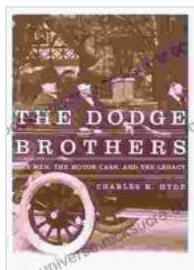

Legacy

The Great Lakes Series has had a lasting impact on the world of racing. The series has helped to develop some of the greatest drivers and cars in the world, and it has created some of the most memorable moments in racing history.

The Great Lakes Series is a true American racing legend, and it will continue to be remembered for years to come.
