William J. Seymour was born in Centerville, Louisiana, in 1870. He was the son of former slaves, and he grew up in poverty. Seymour was a devout Christian, and he began preaching at a young age. In 1900, he moved to Los Angeles, where he joined the Pentecostal movement.

In 1906, Seymour began holding revival meetings in a small church on Azusa Street in Los Angeles. The meetings quickly attracted a large following, and the Azusa Street Revival was born. The revival was characterized by intense emotionalism and spiritual experiences, and it soon spread to other parts of the United States and the world.

Seymour was the leader of the Azusa Street Revival, and he was responsible for much of its success. He was a gifted preacher, and he was able to inspire his followers to experience the power of the Holy Spirit. Seymour was also a strong advocate for racial equality, and he welcomed people of all races and backgrounds to his meetings.

The Azusa Street Revival was a major turning point in the history of Pentecostalism. It helped to spread the Pentecostal message to a wider audience, and it led to the establishment of many new Pentecostal churches. Seymour is considered one of the most important figures in the Pentecostal movement, and his legacy continues to inspire Christians around the world.

Seymour died in Los Angeles in 1922. He was 52 years old. He is buried in the Evergreen Cemetery in Los Angeles.
