Planning Your Itinerary

The first step in planning your Alaska trip is to decide what you want to see and do. If you're interested in hiking, you'll want to spend time in Denali National Park, home to Mount Denali, the highest mountain in North America. If you're a fan of wildlife, you'll want to visit Glacier Bay National Park, where you can see whales, bears, and other animals in their natural habitat. And if you're interested in history, you'll want to spend time in Skagway, a gold rush town that's still full of character.

Once you know what you want to see and do, you can start planning your itinerary. We recommend spending at least two weeks in Alaska, so that you have enough time to explore the different regions of the state. Here's a sample itinerary that you can use as a starting point:

- Day 1-3: Arrive in Anchorage and spend a few days exploring the city. Visit the Alaska Native Heritage Center, go for a hike in Chugach State Park, or take a day trip to Turnagain Arm.
- Day 4-6: Rent a car and drive to Denali National Park. Spend a few days hiking in the park and looking for wildlife. Consider taking a flightseeing tour of the park for a bird's-eye view of the stunning scenery.
- Day 7-9: Drive to Seward and board a boat for a day trip to Glacier Bay National Park. Spend the day whale watching, kayaking, or hiking. Consider staying overnight in Glacier Bay Lodge for a truly immersive experience.
- Day 10-12: Drive to Skagway and spend a few days exploring the town's gold rush history. Visit the Klondike Gold Rush National Historical Park, ride the White Pass & Yukon Route Railroad, or take a hike to Laughton Glacier.
- Day 13-14: Return to Anchorage and depart for home.

Choosing the Right Activities

There are endless activities to choose from in Alaska, so it's important to choose the ones that are right for you. If you're interested in hiking, there are trails for all levels of hikers, from easy day hikes to challenging multi-day treks. If you're a fan of wildlife, there are many opportunities to see whales, bears, moose, and other animals in their natural habitat. And if you're interested in history, there are many museums and historical sites to visit.

Here are a few of our favorite activities in Alaska:

- Hiking: Denali National Park, Kenai Fjords National Park, and Glacier Bay National Park are all great places to go hiking. There are trails for all levels of hikers, from easy day hikes to challenging multi-day treks.
