The Battle of the Little Bighorn

The Battle of the Little Bighorn was fought on June 25, 1876, between the 7th Cavalry Regiment of the United States Army and a combined force of Lakota, Cheyenne, and Arapaho warriors. The battle was a resounding defeat for the 7th Cavalry, with Custer and all of his men being killed.

The battle has been the subject of much debate and controversy, with historians offering a variety of explanations for Custer's defeat. Some historians have argued that Custer underestimated the strength of the Native American forces, while others have blamed his reckless and overconfident leadership. Still others have pointed to the lack of support from other units of the army.

Troopers With Custer

In Troopers With Custer, author Frederic F. Van de Water provides a detailed and moving account of the battle and its aftermath, based on extensive research and interviews with survivors. Van de Water's book is a classic work of military history, and his vivid and evocative writing brings the battle to life. Van de Water's book is a must-read for anyone interested in the Battle of the Little Bighorn and American history.
